Gridiron

guests from many parts of the world and most of the States of the Union. The list included Chief Justice Vinson and Associate Justices Black, Reed, Frankfurter, Douglas, Jackson, Rutledge and Burton.

Duke of Windsor Guest.
Among the foreign dignitaries were the Duke of Windsor and the Ambassadors of Great Britain, Australia, France, China, the Netherlands and the Philippines.

The cabinet was present almost in full force, headed by Secretary of State Byrnes. Other members were Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, Attorney General Clark, Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, Secretary of the Interior Krug, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, Secretary of Commerce Harman and Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach.

Ranking military dignitaries, included Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, Vice Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King, Gen. Carl Spaatz, U. S. A., and Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, U. S. M. C. Congress was represented by a large delegation headed by Senator Barkley, the present Majority Leader. Senator White, the Minority Leader who will step into the majority post in January, and Representative Martin, the House Speaker, too.

From the States came Gov. Dewey of New York, Gov. Ralph F. Gates of Indiana, Gov. Green of Illinois, and William Preston Lane, Governor-elect of Maryland.

Lewis included.
Labor leaders included William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

Sharp focus was put on the incoming Congress and the maneuverings of the GOP to take charge in January.

The character portraying Representative Martin found on advice of former President Herbert Hoover that no occasion might arise to cause even a slight turn to the left.

"Take an example from me," the characterized Mr. Hoover said. "Keep going right—and you'll meet yourself coming back."

used for streets, a pot lacking a chicken, and a withered sunflower. Mr. Hoover recalled that the missing wheel had been lost "just as we were going around the corner to prosperity."

As search was begun for a horse with a winning streak, this rang out: "Put on your old gray bonnet With the Hoover button on it And we'll hitch old Dobbin to the shay."

When the New Deal's over We'll be back in clover!"

On inauguration day!" Mr. Hoover and Representative Martin agreed to return to "the old-time religion," according to St. Mark Hanna and St. Joseph N. Pew. A gridiron chorus, clapping with glory fury, chanted:

"And it's good enough for me!" All this and the little faded sunflower that had been found in the buggy in the old stable provoked inquiry as to whatever had happened to Alf Landon. A Gridiron impersonator appeared to answer, to the tune of "Forgotten," thus:

"Forgotten me? You've not forgotten me! You've not forgotten me! The votes from Vermont and Maine. The days when we sang 'Oh, Susanna' And rode on the 'Sunflower' train. Now all of the things that I told Are coming at last to be— And like birds winging home in the evening, All the people have come back to me! So our party has won in the landslide That I started, you must allow! You may have forgotten me 10 long years, But you will remember me now!"

Stassen's Lament.
However, he broke loose in GOP ranks. Harold Stassen, who had chosen not to run for the Senate and had found himself to be an orphan of the November storm, burst upon the scene sobbing bitterly about the Republican Old Guard.

"You made me what I am today, When victory crowned the GOP. My hope within me died. The Old Guard shatters every dream, You fooled me from the start, And since we are through, May God bless you— With the curse of an aching heart!"

The stable groom, unmoved, proposed cheers for Senator-elect Bricker, the candidate of God, country and Ohio Star. This sent principals and chorus into "Doin' What Comes Naturally" in this way: "Folks ain't dumb where I come from, They ain't had any learnin', They just vote for G. O. P., 'Adoin' what comes naturally.... You don't have to pass in a school exam."

For to get on the payroll of your Uncle Sam. You don't have to look in a book to learn How to share in the moola that is here to burn. That comes naturally! Some folks from Maine to Texas Can't even write their name. They sign their checks with 'X's. But they all vote just the same! Folks ain't dumb where I come from, They ain't had any learnin', They just vote for G. O. P., 'Adoin' what comes naturally!"

Republican Chairman Reece wasn't sure which presidential possibility would win in 1948. But he said it might be Honest Tom Dewey, Honest Bob Taft, Honest John Bricker, Honest Earl Warren, Honest Arthur Vandenberg—

"Pardon me, Boss," the groom cut in, "but is they all THAT honest?"

Any One "Our Hero."
A "woman" voter, who had brought up the subject, exclaimed, "What difference does it make? Whoever it is, he will be our hero." "She" warbled:

"Come, come, we'll love you only, Our hearts are true. Come, come, our lives are lonely, We long for you. Come, come, New Deal is going— In '48 our strength will be showing, Who'll be in line. Come, come, we will elect you— Come, hero mine!"

The Democratic circus was a sad scene. The chief clown, characterized as George Allen, presidential buddy and head of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., was found to be funny no more. He sobbed, in Pagliacci strain:

"The show is ended and my sorrows are blended With rosy memories of laughs I used to get. Though G. O. P. our customers have stolen You still have Harry—but I have RFC."

A hard-bolled Robert E. Hannagan, Democratic national chairman, cracked his ringmaster's whip and said: "Save it for the cash customers, George. After all, you're the director of 28 corporations and 1 cartel. Victor Emmanuel will still take care of you."

"I know," retorted Allen, "but we Southern Democrats don't like the idea of spending our own money."

Porter's Song.
Paul Porter, until recently head of the OPA, tried to keep a hot dog stand going, but to the tune of "Yes, We Have No Bananas," he encountered this:

"Yes! We haven't got hot dogs, Ain't even got Porter—Hooley! We've onions and mustard and pickles and such And the some buns on the way. We got some old-fashioned low prices And a couple of new-fangled crises. But now we're getting some hot dogs, We ain't got Paul Porter—Hooley!"

The snake had walked out on the Democratic circus snake charmer, Senator Joe Guffey, Senator Barkley, the majority leader, was in heavy bandages from what had happened in November. Besides, he was bored. His plight was recorded, in tune to "A Nightingale Sang in Berkeley Square" in this fashion:

"That fateful night, November 5th, We had customers packed in for fair. And the show was going simply swell 'Til the elephant got in Barkley's hair. The PAC looked mighty mean As brave Alben walked into its lair. Then OPA just passed away And the elephant got in Barkley's hair. But through all this gloom there had been a smiling face, identified as that of former Vice President and Commerce Secretary Wallace, a circus aerialist. He came forward, "I fell my head," he said, and sang, to the strain of "Man on the Flying Trapeze," his answer to queries about his "retreat to Moscow": "Once I was happy, but now I'm forlorn. Out of the cabinet, back to the corn, Haunted by piggies plowed under when born. My body is blistered by Byrnes. JIM Byrnes. Now this charmer who plotted my downfall and pain. Sal! the Kremlin we never should please. But I'll still save the world and the universe, too, As I swing on my Russian trapeze— Oh! "I float through the air With my milk and my cheese, The Hottentots thrill at my Russian trapeze. CIO banners I'll fly in the breeze. I'll be back for the forty-eight show."

Byrd Seeks the Boss.
Sheriff (Senator) Byrd, appeared in character to serve the writ of attachment on the old Democratic show. He asked for the boss, and located him (as President Truman laughed heartily at the head table) in the bandmaster's tent from which were waiting somewhat sourly the strains of "Missouri Waltz," which Mr. Truman plays whenever he sits down at the piano.

It was decided, after the bankruptcy papers had been served, that the Democratic circus had a future only on the Dixie circuit. For the first time in its history, the Gridiron Club expressed itself and the situation in hot rhythm. To the multi-metered cadences of "Blues in the Night," it intoned: "Our friends they done told us Way back in September; Our friends they done told us— Down at the piano. You don't have to worry. And please don't send Harry— But then the landside begun. A voter's a two-face, A worrisome thing Who'll leave you to sing

The blues in the night." Doubt was expressed that the Democratic circus would ever get back into the big-time circuit again. This was dispelled by Hannagan, Democratic chairman, who explained that the President had found the way for a return. He would co-operate.

A roustabout, hearing this, stepped into the limelight and to the music of "Of Thee I Sing," broke in with—

"Of us we sing, Harry. Courage is the greatest thing, Harry. Taft will shout and thunder, Fulbright raise a fuss. We've a right to wonder What becomes of us. Of us we sing, Harry. You will need that certain thing, Harry."

Make the word "co-operation" Worthwhile of a mighty Nation. To thee we sing."

Five Billion More.
When organized labor had a turn, they depicted Bill Green as Phil Murray, to the strains of "Give Me Five Minutes More," intoned as follows:

Green: What we want's more dough— AFL-CIO— We can't live on the wage you allow. Murray: Give us five billion more, (Continued on Page A-15.)

1200 Regular Fine Shirts of Imported English Broadcloth

Come prepared to see the finest, most exquisite shirts since the war! Not sports shirts, but handsome, correct, business shirts, endowed with maximum quality.

Here briefly is the story. Long months ago, we made a most fortunate purchase in England of 3000 yards of "Grandrelle" woven Broadcloth, one of the finest shirtings made in the British Isles... and guaranteed fadeless. When these goods had finally passed through customs, we sent them to one of the oldest and finest shirt makers in America... a hundred-year-old company who started making shirts in 1847 when James Polk was President and Abraham Lincoln was still a country lawyer in Illinois. These shirts have just come in... and they exceed even our expectation. Superb, custom quality construction from start to finish. Collar-attached style, with single needle sleeves and French cuffs. Exquisite stripings on Blues, Tans and Greys... there are an abundance of the Blues that men prefer. Sizes 14½ to 17, sleeve lengths 32 to 35. No limit as to quantity, but we hope you won't buy more than three, or six at the most, so we may share them with our many customers.

Note the Special Location for This Event

Shirts are on sale at 9 A.M. Monday morning, in our former Military Dept., Second Floor, front, away from the bustle of Christmas shopping. Come directly there. Shirts are laid out in sizes, in their original packing, 3 to a box, for speedy selection. Gift wrapped, if wanted, at no extra charge.
